

It's Your Baby's First Birthday

When your child turns 1, you probably become the happiest mother in the world seeing that the baby once in your tummy has grown up so fast in a year. You hardly notice he now start mumbling. Yes, and you look at his eyes and you see there is so much love on your little bundle of joy. It wouldn't be mistaken that you are more adept for that birthday party that you've been planning months before the big day because you have researched and asked friends about their preparation when their little ones had them. So, to better prepare you, here's a start draft for the party materials that you should have to make it more fun.

The party need not be expensive and certainly, you can check a number of materials from the loot bags to the birthday hats and the birthday banner. All you have to ask yourself first is which theme would be most suitable for your little one. Once you have picked out the perfect theme, then, you're all set to acquire those party needs.

Have you checked the invitations yet? It starts with this. Once the invitations are all sent, your guests might probably be able to guess the party theme through the invitations. So, this should well match your theme but still go with various designs on the front cover such as vivid colors that will make your guests expectant on what you've prepared for like kids' games and even the food. You can buy them in few or several pieces for one pack.

Then you can add printed balloons to make the venue more colorful and lively. Kids love balloons but they should not be left alone with it unless they are already capable to handle the sticks themselves. There are full body balloons of cartoon characters that are more exciting. Kids love them. They wont surely lay their eyes off them.

For the little guests, of course, head ware like party hats or masks would be fun. They of course won't surely leave the party without the favors. These party favors are better useful and not harmful. Choose those that are not sharp and too small. The celebrant can go hippy, sporty, posh and even educational. Some moms love those coloring books, stickers and girly stuff inside party bags.

Table essentials would also include table covers, place mats, plates, cups and utensils that match the theme or maybe the most conspicuous color. Some signs, door and wall hangings like banners and streamers prove to be more interesting. However, noisemakers and blowouts give more excitement in a party, ever. When the party is over, thank you cards prove to be polite to express your thanks.

See? You don't need a lot for that little one's first birthday party. But anything you can get, you should have a way to buy the most reasonable price that won't hurt that much. At the end of the day, everyone will think of how much they had spent a worthwhile time during the party and not forgetting the loads of fun that they will be bringing back home with them.
