

Find Out The Truth About Anyone

Ever wondered how police, private investigators, and law enforcement offices uncover the truth about someone? Ever wonder how they finally find that elusive rapist or murderer? It's simple, really. They make use of massive databases, like the ones provided by Net Detective, a professional background and people search system, and online information source.

Here is just some of the information investigators access through Net Detective.

- * Check Criminal Records
- * Check Registered Sex Offenders
- * Research Your Family History
- * Find Birth And Death Records.
- * Find Adoption And DMV Records
- * Check And Verify Social Security Numbers
- * Find Unlisted Phone Numbers
- * Access Hard To Find Addresses
- * Phone Numbers And E-mail Addresses

Taking such steps is the first leg to finding whomever it is they are seeking.

As for us "regular folks," how can we benefit from a site like Net Detective? Below are some of the powerful features of Net Detective:

- * Perform Background checks
- * Powerful reverse search to find addresses, phone numbers and more
- * Find e-mail addresses
- * Get your own FBI file and see what they know about YOU
- * Locate an old friend, missing relative, or lost love
- * Check out your daughter's new boyfriend
- * Protect yourself from Identity Theft
- * Track down people who owe you money
- * Find trial transcripts and court records
- * New data added and accessible on a monthly basis

The Net Detective database includes:

- * 217,766,271 U.S. Residents
- * Over 700,000 Net Detective Members
- * Instant Online Access From Any Computer

If you're not sure you need Net Detective, ask yourself these questions...

- * Wouldn't you like to know if your babysitter had been in trouble with the police? Or if his or her mother or father had a criminal record?
- * And wouldn't you like to know the same about someone you were interviewing for a job?
- * Or what if you are meeting someone for business, and know nothing about them? Wouldn't you feel safer if you ran a quick background check on him or her before the first meeting?
- * If you have just moved home and want to find a new family doctor or dentist, wouldn't you get some extra peace of mind AFTER running a check for malpractice suits or other legal problems?
- * And imagine being able to run credit checks on business partners, colleagues and even on a friend who asks for a small loan?
- * Perhaps most disturbing of all, if you have young children, wouldn't you like to know if there are any registered sex offenders living and working in your community?

All the information you need to run these checks and more - is available through Net Detective.

One of the most successful ways to use sites like Net Detective is in the search for missing persons. Every day, in towns and cities all across the US, people go missing. Sometimes they're the victim of crime, but in many cases, they simply drop out of sight on purpose. Usually they're trying to escape some problem or avoid some responsibility.

It used to be expensive to track down a missing person. You had to hire a private detective and pay them by the hour to do a "locate." That is not necessary now.

Today, your search to locate a missing person can be found on your computer. Many public records and business databases are available through the Internet. Anyone with online access and a bit of determination can do the same kind of investigative work themselves that used to be exclusive to private eyes or law enforcement personnel.

Net Detective is a good place to start.
