

Call Women With Confidence

You just went out the night before. Saw the most beautiful women in the world, walked up to them, got their number, and now you are ready to call them. I am sure there was a lot more work involved in getting their number, but for the purposes of this article we are going to keep the scenario short.

Today is the day you will be calling your woman and you need to do it with confidence. When you call women, one of the only ways to truly approach them on the phone is to remain confident the entire time. You want to think of things to say with confidence and keep the conversation going at all times. Soon as that conversation dies down and the phone goes silent, she is going to try everything she can to quickly get off the phone. When you call women for the first time, the second they answer, you need to remain confident. Here are some questions to ask on the phone that will get great results:

"How was your day"?

"How was work"?

"How was school"?

"What do you like to do in your free time"?

"When are you free"?

As you can see, these are very basic questions that should get your great results. The reason being is that these questions are all open-ended. You never want to ask questions that will give a straight yes/no answer. Let's face it, women love to talk, you might as well give them something to talk about. Sometimes it pays off for them to do most of the talking and for you to be a great listener. If you let women talk to you and tell you about their problems, you are building a relationship and trust with them. Asking these types of questions will definitely break the ice and will guarantee at least 20-30 minutes of phone conversation. You don't want to spend much more than that on the phone. Soon as you hear the phone conversation goes dry, it is time to hang it up.

Most men don't realize the value of asking open-ended questions. Not only do you need to ask open-ended questions on the telephone, but you need to ask them in person when you go on your next date. When you respond to open-ended questions, remember to remain confident and answer them intelligently. If you don't know the answer to a question or feel like you can't answer it properly, try to do your best. As soon as you can try and change the subject without sounding obvious that you are trying to change it. Women love men that take control of situations so if you remain on top of your game with confidence there should be no reason why you won't be landing a 2nd date. Beautiful women are just like any other women. They think the same, act the same, and the only difference is in their appearance. Don't think of them as beautiful women, think of them as any other woman. Confidence is KEY to your success!

About the Author

Are you tired of not getting the woman you deserve? Seduction is not a choice - you must learn how to attract and seduce women. Learn how to call women with confidence by receiving my free seduction reports at <http://www.finalseduction.com>
Source: www.isnare.com

Source: <http://articles.exospy.com>