

Is it Possible to Control Pet Odor Through Pet Spa Products?

Fido may be man's best friend, but the odor sure isn't! Whether you have a cat or a dog, you'll find that pet odor can be overwhelming at times. Many people turn to pet spa products in an attempt to get rid of this nasty smell, but do these products really work?

Pet spa products are usually specifically formulated to give your pet an odor makeover and get rid of unpleasant smells that might keep you from getting too close to your pet. Often they are quite effective, but you do need to watch what ingredients are in the products you are using your dog or cat. Most of the pet shampoos, deodorizers and conditioners are made with a number of harsh ingredients that might not be so good for your pet.

The Downside of Chemical Pet Spa Products

Many of the pet spa products that are offered on today's market are chock full of chemicals to get rid of smells, eliminate fleas, etc. While these are great benefits, the actual effect might not be what you are looking for.

What many pet owners don't realize is that their pet may be sensitive to certain chemicals. It's often difficult to know if this is the case, but your pet may be suffering in silence. Itchiness and agitation are signs that your dog or cat isn't doing so well with the chemicals in the pet spa products being used. Sometimes these symptoms won't appear until a little later and end up being mistaken for allergies to other things. Animals can also build up sensitivities to certain chemicals that are used over a long period of time, so it's not usually a good idea to use anything that could cause irritation.

Even if your pet isn't reacting to the chemicals, they aren't necessarily a good idea. Do you really want to treat your best friend with substances containing something you can't even pronounce?

Natural Pet Spa Products

Natural solutions to pet odor exist and they work just as well as the chemical laden pet spa products, but without the side effects. The use of natural ingredients and herbs is rapidly growing in popularity and quite a few pet owners are moving toward the all natural approach.

The advantages of going natural are many and you'll find that your pet does far better without the extra ingredients that can cause problems both now and in the future. Your pet has no likelihood of developing an allergy to the pet spa product and the natural ingredients are often what the chemical version was based on, anyway!

Be sure to check the label on any product before using it on your pet. Often bottles that claim the ingredients are organic and natural still contain some chemicals. A brief scan of the ingredient list will let you know if that's the case or not and you can treat your pet for bad odor without feeling guilty.

Look for pet products that contain herbs and essences to control the odor and to add shine. If you are looking for combination product to repel insects while getting rid of pet odor, there are natural methods of doing this, as well. Herbs like eucalyptus and lemon grass work well to combat both pests like fleas and those icky smells.

No one should have to tolerate nasty pet odors, but that doesn't mean you need to treat your cat or dog with a harsh cleanser, either. Opt for natural pet spa products to get the job done . . . minus the chemicals.

About the Author

Sells and markets natural dog spa products and grooming supplies. All natural dog shampoos, conditioners, dog odor remover, tear stain remover and more.

Source: www.isnare.com

Source: <http://articles.exospy.com>